NC State is committed to equal opportunities for qualified students with disabilities and provides reasonable accommodations (academic adjustments, auxiliary aids/services, and modifications to policies/procedures) in accordance with non-discrimination laws.

Some areas of this course may be inaccessible, and the use of the following accommodations will be needed to ensure equal access. As the Instructor, it is your responsibility to provide these approved accommodations in your course. An interactive communication with the student is needed to discuss applicable accommodations and usage. Not all approved accommodations may be applicable in each course depending on course delivery method, format, essential expectations, or requirements.

Do not advise the student to drop the course or deny the use of the requested accommodation. The Disability Resource Office (DRO) should be consulted before speaking with the student for guidance if you have concerns in providing approved accommodations, or if alternative accommodations need to be discussed.
